Indians Set to Gain fr

IMMIGRATION POLICY Trump regime proposes points based syst

Our Bureaus

Pune & Bengaluru: Indian nationals are likely to be the biggest beneficiaries of US President Donald Trump's new plan to change the system that allows foreign immigrants to become permanent residents in the country.

Trump proposal for a points-based system means people with skills will be preferred for permanent residency as against the current country-based quotas that favours family ties for green cards.

Experts say proposed system much more objective and predictable

Under the plan, 57% of the proportion of green cards, or lawful permanent residence status, will be given to people with skill-based visas as against the 12% currently. Today, two thirds of green cards are issued to families.

The points based system is similar to what countries like Canada, Australia and New Zealand follow, which means skilled workers get a faster route to permanent residency status in the United States.

"We cherish the open door that we want to create for our country, but a big proportion of those immigrants must come in through merit and skill," said Trump.

Every year, the US issues nearly 1.1 million green cards, which gives foreign nationals a path to US citizenship in five years and, more importantly, life-time permission to live and work there.

Currently, it takes an Indian national at least nine-and-a-half-year on average to get a green card.

A large number of Indians who have gone to the US on H-1B visas and are in line for a green card could benefit from this proposed amendment.

"If this proposal becomes law it will obviously help Indian H-1B visa holders because it will probably do away with a lot of the green card backlog. There are a finite number of US Green Cards and they are taken by family-based petitioners," said Vivek Tandon, founder of EB5 BRICS and an immigration advisor. "It could help reduce the wait time for green card issuance."

Kamark's departure comes as Jet faces two regulatory probes while its lenders look for investors to save the airline. To be sure, a new board will be
